This commitment does not only refer to the direct laundering of money, but also to any activity that facilitates money laundering as well as the funding of terrorist or criminal activities.

Legislative Background of Money Laundering:

Money Laundering is the process by which criminals attempt to hide and disguise the true origin and ownership of the proceeds of their criminal activities, thereby avoiding criminal prosecution, conviction and confiscation of the illegally obtained funds. The main money laundering stages are:

1. Placement: cash are placed into the financial system or retail economy or are smuggled out of the country. The aims of the launderer are to remove the cash from the location of acquisition so as to avoid detection from the authorities and to then transform it into other asset forms for example: travellers' cheques or postal orders
2. Layering: is the first attempt at concealment or disguise of the source of the ownership of the funds by creating complex layers of financial transactions designed to disguise the audit trail and provide anonymity
3. Integration: the money is integrated into the legitimate economic and financial system and is assimilated with all other assets in the system. Integration of the "cleaned" money into the economy is accomplished by the launderer making it appear to have been legally earned

Money Laundering Offences:

A person guilty of an offence under the provisions of section 3 of the Act, shall be punishable on conviction:

- Natural person, with a fine which shall not be less than fifty thousand dollars, but which may extend to two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, or with imprisonment for a term which shall

The Company has identified and assessed the ML/TF risk in which is associated with the products and services it offers, the jurisdictions it operates in, the customers it attracts and the transaction or delivery channels the Company is using to service its clients.

Identification of Money laundering risks

Risk factors including:

- our clients;
- the products and services we provide;
- the countries that our clients operate in;
- the transactions we are involved in; and
- the delivery channels.

Risk factor 1: Our clients

- The Company identifies the type of clients that its business serves and assesses whether these are known to be frequently used by money launderers.
- The Company separates the clients by industry, size or type (eg, individual, trust, LLP or limited company).

In order to identify all the types of clients that the Company serves, we:

- consider whether any of our principals have industry specialists;
- review our website or promotional material for references to client industry or nature
- consider whether there are certain types of clients that require senior management approval at take-on.

The Company then assesses the risk of money laundering associated with each of those client types. When assessing client risk, we are also considering whether there are any characteristics that are known to be used by money-launderers.

Once the Company has assessed the level of risk associated with each client type, it then identifies any mitigating actions that need to be taken to address this risk. This may include enhanced due diligence, senior management approval at take-on, or updating client due diligence on a very frequent basis.

Risk factor 2: Products and services we provide

- The Company identifies all the services that it offers and assesses whether these could be used by criminals to launder money. In order to identify all the services, we use, the Company takes the following into consideration: the services we are authorised to provide under our license from FSC.

Once the Company has assessed the level of risk associated with each service type, it identifies any mitigating actions that it already has in place or plans to take to address the risk.

Risk factor 3: The countries that our clients reside/operate in

The Company identifies the countries that our clients reside/operate in:

- the countries our clients are based in or operate from;
- where our clients obtain their funding from;

The Company then assesses the risk of money laundering associated with each of those countries. When assessing geographic risk, the Company considers factors such as whether there is a perception of corruption in that country, whether there is known to be criminal activity or if the country is on the sanctions list.

Risk factor 4: The transactions we are involved in

The Company identifies any transactions that it could facilitate and assesses the risk that these transactions could be related to the proceeds of a crime or terrorist financing.

The Company identifies the types of transactions that pass through our clients' money account and assesses the risk associated with each of these types of transaction.

Withdrawals and Deposits processed by the Company's Backoffice Department could also be used to support criminal activity or effect illegal transactions.

The Company then documents its risk assessment of the transactions that it is involved in.

The Company identifies how to mitigate or plans to mitigate those risks. We have set out further guidance on how to address the risks below.

Risk factor 5: Delivery channels

The Company identifies all the methods of interaction it has with its clients. Some delivery channels can increase risk because they can make it more difficult to determine the identity of a client.

Factors to consider are:

- whether we meet our clients face-to-face;
- whether our clients are introduced through an intermediary and whether the Company only corresponds with that intermediary;
- the extent to which the Company relies on the Client Due Diligence (hereinafter referred to as "CDD") of the referrer or intermediary (and the procedures we employ to justify reliance) or the quality of evidence obtained from them to support our own CDD.

Identification Procedures:

Where the Client is a prospective Client, an account must be opened only after the relevant pre-account opening due diligence and identification measures and procedures have been conducted. Through the various steps of this procedure the Company ensures that it gathers the necessary KYC and customer due diligence documentation and information as required by the Law.
